

ILS International Law and Practice Course 2018

Becoming an International Lawyer

Hosted by the International Law Section

10 lecture course in Sydney CBD- commencing 6 February 2018 with The Hon Justice Michael Kirby.

Would you like to learn more about the practice of international law? The International Law Section (ILS) of the Law Council of Australia will hold a course in 2018 consisting of ten lectures specifically designed for young lawyers with at least one year in practice. Lectures will be held monthly, with a short assessment task and a certificate of completion upon conclusion.

The program will address questions you might encounter in practice, such as how to draft arbitration and choice of law clauses; how to deal with international sales of goods and CISG problems; how does the WTO work; understanding UNCITRAL texts; how do civil law contracts work in Asia and Europe; what conflicts of law issues may arise in your practice; as well as an introduction to a range of public international law topics.

The seminars will be held on the first Tuesday of each month from February to November at 7.45am-9.00am at various places in Sydney CBD. The cost is $285 (GST included), which includes membership of the ILS through to June 2019 or $55 per lecture. The course is available to all lawyers, although the primary focus is on educating younger members of the profession.
