

Join ACDC in Sydney in 2015 for Mediator training and accreditation

ACDC leads the field in dispute resolution training. A not-for-profit organisation, it is dedicated to advancing Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) and providing professional development training. ACDC's Mediation Accreditation is held by many of the industry's most respected mediators and is widely recognised and acknowledged within the ADR industry.

Our 5 day Mediation Course meets current Australian National Mediator Accreditation Standards (NMAS) and will equip participants with the skills needed to mediate in a range of dispute resolution situations using industry best practice criteria for competent mediation practice. Participants wishing to become ACDC Accredited mediators and apply for recognition under the Australian National Mediator Accreditation System should undertake our additional Accreditation Day.

During the course participants will:

- Gain a comprehensive theoretical foundation for the practice, uses and applications of mediation. As well as competence in understanding each step of the mediation process including Pre-mediation and Post-mediation.
- Learn how to evaluate the different types of mediation processes and negotiation styles to be able to set up the optimal mediation process for a successful outcome.

- Employ crucial communication skills to assist parties to identify and explore key issues, generate and reality test options, shift impasses and negotiate agreement
- Learn how to identify and employ practical responses to negotiation strategies
- Effectively manage issues relating to power, emotional responses and cross-cultural factors
- Learn how to document agreements and develop strategies for responding to legal representatives, support people, experts and others who may be attending the mediation.
